BEAR CAPPED WITH A TIN MILK PAIL

Is Charged With Assault and Battery and Disturbance of the Peace.

BRUIN'S SAD MISTAKE

In an Effort to Drain Bucket of Warm Milk, Animal Caught Vessel Fast on Its Head—Escapes From Bullets and Gets Out of His Yard.

Bangor, Me.—Somewhere in the state of northern Maine there is a big bear, for whose arrest Pete Tarrilo of Bangor is willing to pay a suitable reward. Pete charges this bear with assault and battery, disturbance of the peace and larceny, and he is willing to go to almost any expense and trouble to get him. The bear can be identified easily. He is wearing over his head one of a tin milk pail. He has been seen with five bullet holes in it, and on that account staggers about like a drunken man.

It was sunset at Shin Pond, which peaceful locality is a few miles north of Bangor, when Pete Tarrilo, who is fat and fifty, was sitting on a stool just outside the barn milking their best cow. Pete was just inside the barn door milking another cow. Suddenly Mrs. Pete was startled by a loud "woof," "woof" behind her.

At first she merely smiled and kept on milking, for she knew that her husband was a great joker and thought that he was trying to have some fun with her. But when she got a cut across the back that knocked her sprawling, she knew that it was no joke, that Pete wouldn't treat her that way, and when she saw the cow gallop wildly off down the lane, she knew that some one or something had declared war.

Scrambling to her feet as quickly as her two hundred pounds would allow, Mrs. Pete was astonished to see a 400-pound bear with his nose stuck into the pail of warm milk. She yelled to her husband, who came out, took one look, and raced to the house for his rifle.

While Pete was gone the bear lapped up most of the milk, and then, in an effort to get what was in the bottom of the pail, he lifted with his nose and milked to run down his throat. That was a bad move to the bear, for the instant he tilted the pail the milk fell down over his neck and caught in the thick fur. He paused in a puzzled way, then began to run around in circles, occasionally butting into something, which had the effect of forcing the milk more firmly down his shoulders.

Pete appeared with his rifle and took a shot at the blundering bear, the bullet making a nice round hole in the tin pail but not disturbing the animal.

TO BE THE WHITE HOUSE BABY.

For the first time in 15 years, when Governor Wilson becomes president of the United States, the White House will have a baby occupant. The baby is Josephine, daughter of Mrs. P. C. Cothran of Raleigh, N. C. Mrs. Cothran is the only daughter of Mrs. George Howe, the only sister of Governor Wilson.

Josephine is about 15 months old, and is a favorite of her great uncle. The mother is only twenty-two years old, and she is probably the only girl of Washington life as much as her cousins, the daughters of the president-elect.

SIMPLE SELENA

By MARY WESTCOTT.

"So, Miss Mason," Mrs. Calley concluded, "I've brought you this girl to hire her out in a good, safe, plain home."

Mrs. Calley can never quite forget that she was once housekeeper for "rich folks," especially for the Sturtevant Wolds, who allow her to pension, she always distinctly condescends toward Dixville households and their uncertain maids.

"Selena," the girl herself answered. "Selena Melissa Saleag."

Her high, shrill voice made even young Professor Mason, in the library beyond, glance up surprised. In his brief vacations from the college where he taught chemistry he seldom noticed the temporary ruler of his mother's kitchen; but this specimen promised interest. Blushing hotly, the girl went on:

"I'm hunting work. Do you want me to come?"

And thereupon she smiled straight at Mrs. Mason with absolutely confiding innocence; and Mrs. Mason stammered: "Why, yes, Selena!"

Apart from her unattractiveness she was not unattractive.

"In fact," the professor told his mother, "if that girl's hair was not bawled quite so tight back from her face, and if she could hold her mouth shut instead of open, and knew where to put her arms and her hands, she might pass for one of our freshmen from a country school. Her eyes are wonderful!"

But despite Mrs. Mason's kindly efforts to improve these deficiencies Selena remained what the professor insisted was "a serene caricature of her inherent possibilities." Meanwhile the professor watched with secret enjoyment the spectacle of Selena doing her best to be what she called "good, plain help," and his mother trying to make her over into what she considered "a well-trained servant."

That Selena plainly never or could become—though she certainly "helped." For all that pendulous lower lip of hers, and her drooping shoulders, and the queer, awkward way she let her arms dangle, palms front, Selena could work both neatly and rapidly. Her big, red fingers did no damage, and the professor noted that except for being so almost unnaturally red, they were beautiful and curiously well kept for a girl of her kind.

In the professor's presence Selena seemed always to touch the very summit of her green simplicity. She begged him, for example, to take down from the hall a picture of "Daniel in the Lion's Den."

"Why, Mr. Mason?" He could have sworn there were tears in her great, blue eyes. "Can't you see there ain't one kind face amongst all them lions?"

Even when away at college he might not forget Selena. The tan pajamas could not be forwarded at once because they had been elaborately starched and ironed by Selena. "So they'd be all fine for Mr. Professor's next party," Mrs. Mason, whose sense of humor was limited, wrote her son perplexedly when Selena asked her how soon she meant to call on Mrs. Calley.

"Of course you'd ought to call on her. She brought me here!" Selena had argued. "Say, everybody knows that visitin' shouldn't be all on the one side!"

Then one day, without excuse, almost without warning, Selena went away. Mrs. Calley assumed an almost belittling silence. Even in his snug college study the professor felt oddly depressed by the news. There was to be a vacation next week—and how dull home would be without Selena's cheerful, diverting follies! The professor sighed as he went to his appointment to address the Graduate club of a neighboring woman's college on "Chemistry in the Home."

Later his smile was rueful when he heard that the meeting would close with a general discussion of "The Servant Problem."

The discussion dragged. Everybody looked relieved when a tall, fair girl entered hurriedly and was led to the front of the room.

And she was.

"I must confess," she began, "that I've studied this subject pretty intimately."

Briefly she outlined her theories. "And now," she suggested, "perhaps you'll understand better if I illustrate from real life. This, for instance, is how not to break in a green girl."

And suddenly she seemed transformed into Professor Mason's own mother—with her lack of humor and her nervous criticism—correcting the errors the professor had a hundred times heard her correct in maids. Quite as suddenly Miss Weld was herself again, bowing to the applause. Then, with a smile that was sweet, innocent and so familiar to the professor that it made him actually dizzy:

"Thank you," she laughed, "and just for pure fun, I'll show you the green maid herself!"

Before them all her shoulders dropped, her jaw pushed forward and hung down, her right arm dangled clumsily, palm forward, with all the awkwardness of—Selena! Then the professor understood! Heemed in by the roomful of laughing women, he sat and raged. She—this girl—had spied upon his home, had made sport of it. She had mocked at his mother for all the world to see. Only give him a chance to confront this traitor and make her ashamed of herself!

Yet when she went on to imitate other mistresses, in honesty he had to admit that through the fun she really showed where certain domestic troubles lay; and slowly he realized that she could hardly have "taken off" his mother more justly or more mercifully. He knew now why his home was so often maidless. Still the sting hurt; and when in the later reception he found himself close to the ex-Selena Melissa he felt very stern.

"Oh," she was saying, "we've a retired housekeeper—a Mrs. Calley—who helps me to material, though sometimes far afield."

"As far as Dixville, Miss Weld?" Selena Barbara Melissa Weld Saleag wheeled to face the professor.

"You!" she gasped. "Here! Were—were you that lecturer who spoke before I came? And I—oh, what must you think?"

The surrounding group had drifted toward the refreshment table, leaving the two alone. Now that the professor was close to Miss Weld, looking down into those familiar eyes, at last harmoniously framed, he abruptly lost his scientific head.

"Think?" he stammered, "think?" why, Selena, I think you're beautiful!"

"Seriously, please try to forgive me. I also pleaded at last, 'and tell the whole truth to your mother. I really do love her,' she added softly. 'She was very kind to me. Some day I hope to see her again—perhaps—'

"Not perhaps," interrupted the professor, "certainly! She must see you, Selena, like this—"

Again he was growing intoxicated by his nearness to those great, innocent eyes—and by something he thought he read in them.

"Yes—that is—thank you—" Barbara Weld answered nervously. "I wonder—" Her face lit suddenly with an inspiration. "Why shouldn't you both spend this coming vacation with us? My mother would love to meet you—both—and you know—" Her eyes danced at him—"everybody knows that visitin' shouldn't be all on the one side!"

WHAT HAPPENS.

"What happens," asked the politician, "when you pay $30 more for a new suit of clothes than it is worth?"

"My wife goes right down town and pays four times as much for a new gown," replied a man who sat in a front seat.

HER CHANCE.

He—Very well, I'll learn to ride. But suppose I break my neck?

She—Oh, there always are survivors.—Judge.

APPENDICITIS ATTACK HAS FATAL RESULTS

T. A. WATERS (UNCLE ALECK) PASSES TO BEYOND

After an operation for appendicitis, Mr. T. A. Waters ("Uncle Aleck," as he was affectionately known by the entire community) died at the local sanitarium Friday night. The attack came upon him Monday of last week, and an operation was performed the day following. At first he rallied and it was thought the chances were good for his recovery. Thursday he was taken worse, and Friday morning it was seen that death was inevitable. He lived throughout the day Friday, and, though unconscious most of the time, occasionally recognizing those about him, and only a few hours before his death spoke pleasantly to members of his family standing by his bedside.

The burial was at East Side cemetery at 12 o'clock Sunday, and was attended by the largest concourse of people that has ever been seen at a burial there. The funeral services were conducted by Ogechee Lodge of Masons, of which he was a member, and more than a hundred Masons were in the procession that accompanied the body to its last resting place. Among these were members from Stillson, Brooklet, Palaski and Metter lodges. The ceremony was led by Hon. F. H. Saffold, of Swainsboro, preceded by a brief church service by Rev. T. J. Cobb.

The deceased was survived by his wife and nine children, all of whom are living in the vicinity of the old home.

Mr. Waters was 71 years of age and was a Confederate soldier. In an unassuming, modest way he went about doing good among those with whom he came in contact, and to know him was to esteem him as a friend. His popularity was attested by the large attendance upon the funeral, many friends coming from a long distance to attend.

It was as a Mason that Mr. Wa-

SHERIFF SALES YESTERDAY DREW UNUSUAL INTEREST

MUCH PROPERTY WAS SOLD, THOUGH BIDDING WAS SLOW

The public sales before the court house yesterday drew the largest attendance within the memory of "the oldest inhabitant," and it was remarked that a greater amount of property of various kinds was sold than was ever known before. Most of this was of an insignificant class, including everything from badly used farm machinery to very inferior merchandise, though there was some real estate that sold at fair prices.

The property of the R. M. Williams estate, at Metter, was sold at executor's sale, and brought very good prices considering the present financial stringency. The store building was bought by J. R. Dixon at $4,250, after some lively bidding in which there were not less than half a dozen contestants.

Among the property sold was a large amount of equipment belonging to the Bulloch Oil Mill. This included mules and wagons, shovels, rakes and wheelbarrows, electric office fixtures. The mules brought prices considerably below the prices paid for apparently the same class of stock in former years.

CITY COURT TO CONTINUE THROUGHOUT THE WEEK

MANY CASES OF IMPORTANCE TO BE TRIED BY JURIES

City court is in session at this time, with the announced intention of Judge Strange to continue throughout the week or longer in an effort to clear up the docket. The term began last Wednesday and ran through till Friday night, when a recess was taken till Monday. It was upon the reconvening of the court Monday that the judge made his statement in regard to continuing through the week.

A number of important cases have already been disposed of, including numerous convictions for selling liquor, confined entirely to the colored population. The civil docket was reached Friday, and will occupy the attention of the court during the remainder of the term.

A Word From Mr. Waters About the Corn Club

MR. EDITOR:

Please allow a few words in our banner paper to the Bulloch County Corn Club. We have our debts about all easy, and plenty of corn and bacon to take us through next year. If we will economize we can go through all right.

I visited one of my neighbors a few days ago and he took me around and showed me his farm products. He has two large cribs filled with corn and plenty of fodder and hay, 80 bushels of cleaned peas, 3,000 pounds of bacon, 11 cans of lard, and 8 fine hogs yet to kill. He is a young farmer with a fine healthy wife and three of the prettiest children in Bulloch county.

The 4th is coming for the prize in the corn contest this year. Mr. Herbert Franklin is chairman of the Corn Club and I want to hear from him. I will write again when I hear from him.

Yours truly,
H. I. WATERS.

P. S.—Use economy and keep out of debt.

Croupy Coughs and Wheezy Colds.

Chandler Bros. Bankrupt; Liabilities are Over $4,000

Messrs. J. J. and W. H. Chandler, composing the firm of Chandler Bros., trading as the "Cash Concern," have filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. The petition was filed Monday in the court of the referee in bankruptcy in Savannah through their attorney, H. C. Parker, Esq. The assets of the firm are given at approximately $3,000, with liabilities in excess of $4,000. The members of the firm each asks for a homestead of $1,600, to which they are entitled under the law. The first hearing of creditors will be held in Savannah about Jan. 20.

Chandler Bros. have been engaged in the mercantile business in Statesboro for the past two years, and carried a line of notions and dry goods. They have been conducting their business on a cash basis, and have been particularly hard hit by reason of the depression which has prevailed during the fall entire fall and winter. Before coming to Statesboro these young men were residents of Burke county.

COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD MAKES PUBLIC STATEMENT

FUNDS IN HAND NOT SUFFICIENT FOR SIX MONTHS SCHOOLS

Whereas, the county board of education of Bulloch county, after carefully considering a deficit facing us from last year, together with the available public school funds for 1913, decided at their October meeting that it would be unwise to fix the public term for 1913 at more than five months; and, whereas, the subsequent session of the grand jury has recommended in their published presentments that we reconsider our action and fix the term for 1913 at six months without providing or suggesting as to where the funds could come from; therefore, we beg to state that, while we have respect fully considered the recommendation of said grand jury, we are compelled by existing circumstances to decline to reconsider our former action.

In further explanation we want to advise the public that our constant endeavor is to secure better teachers and more efficient service for the county schools, and as a matter of fact have a larger percent of teachers holding first grade license than formerly. Better service always costs more money, not less. We shall welcome the day when the public school funds of Bulloch county will warrant your board of education in taking progressive steps lengthening the public term, paying better salaries, building more suitable school houses, and otherwise improving facilities for the proper education of the children of Bulloch county.

To Be Legal Organ.

As will be observed by reference to a notice in another column, the newly elected county officials have designated the BULLOCH TIMES the legal newspaper for Bulloch county, effective the first of February.

In this connection the TIMES wishes to say that it heartily appreciates the action of the county officials in this preference, which not only means increased profit but increased prestige as well. The TIMES has gone along in a modest way for years, doing its very best to serve its constituents faithfully, and in every instance has tried to do that which seemed to promise the greatest good to the greatest number. It is true that in some instances some of our friends have not agreed with all our efforts, but no man who has been fair and who understands us has charged us with a lack of interest in the people's good.

We shall endeavor to show our appreciation of the distinction which our friends, the new county officials, have seen fit to confer upon us by a faithful discharge of every duty which we may owe the public.

The energetic have to do a lot of work to take care of those who do not work.

There is new beauty in life every day for the person who keeps his eyes open.

Lots of people are sworn into office—and others swear because they are not.

Youth holds forth unbounded attractions for everyone but the youth himself.

More of us might be our brother's keeper, but our brother won't have it that way.

Anyway, Teddy doesn't say anything about his enemies that they don't think about him.

There is only the transposition of two letters between the words "united" and "united."

It's not a question of producing more babies. It's a question of preserving those we have.

It's pretty exasperating to a fat man to have a lean man walk in his shadow on a hot day and laugh at him.

It is wonderful how quickly some people become fervently imbued with the righteousness of certain reforms—just as soon as it becomes apparent that the people with the majority of votes are for them.

A MESSAGE TO WOMEN

Who are "Just Ready to Drop."

When you are "just ready to drop" when you feel so weak that you can hardly drag yourself about—and because you have not slept well, and you get up as tired-out next morning as when you went to bed, then you need help right away.

Miss Lea Dumas writes from Macon, N. Y., saying: "I was in a badly run-down condition for several weeks, but two bottles of Vinol put me on my feet again and made me strong and well. Vinol has done me more good than all the other medicine I ever took."

If the careworn, haggard men and women, the pale, sickly children and feeble old folks around here would follow Miss Dumas' example, they, too, would soon be able to say that "Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron remedy, had built them up and made them strong."

It is a wonderfully strengthening and invigorating body-builder, and will build up your nerves and give you satisfaction. You get your money back if Vinol does not help you. W. H. Bull Co., Frugate, Statesboro, Ga.

A Good Man Gone.

In the death of "Uncle Aleck" Waters, the community has lost a good citizen. His place will be hard to fill among those who know him best. Not possessed with an over-abundance of this world's goods, yet he was wealthy enough to do charity to those in need. This he did not in an assuming way, but with a modesty known only to a generous heart. He did not give alms to be seen and praised of men, but practiced literally that injunction to let not your right hand know what your left hand does.

This writer has seen him on numerous occasions passing by with a small store of such goods as he had and cheerfully distribute of his generosity to those who did not possess them. A small hand of garden truck, a few watermelons, a bushel of potatoes, or a load of wood—such things as his less fortunate friends might not have—these were among the visible evidences of his charity. But greater still, and more to be prized, were the kind words that he met. He had a cheerful word for everybody, and everybody was his friend. Old and young alike affectionately addressed him as "Uncle Aleck," and many were the sore hearts at the announcement of his death.

Especially dear was he to the members of his Masonic fraternity, and in that institution he set an example for faithfulness that may well be emulated. His tongue was not given to speaking ill of his neighbors, but rather to give praise of the good he saw in men. He was clear of strife with all mankind, and no one was ever heard to speak ill of him, because he did no one harm. He was faithful to his lodge, faithful to his brethren individually, and faithful to all mankind, as well becomes all true Masons.

Your political enemies are seldom as bad as you make them out to be—and never as good as their friends say they are.

A Nevada woman has married a newspaper man on a bet. Women take some awful chances when they gamble.

There should be some method devised for conserving the energy wasted by some people in keeping away from work.

Don't be a croaker. Imitate the optimistic hen, who makes the same kind of a noise regardless of what eggs are worth.

A man feels uncomfortable in a new hat that he feels everyone is looking at—but a woman is in her glory under the same conditions.

New York girls spend 60 per cent of their time in making themselves attractive. Down this way nature has done that work for them.

A New York scientist says fish never have the toothache. We don't suppose they are troubled with rheumatism very much, either.

There are men who will sit up all night with a sick cow but have not patience to take care of their own squawking chicks for fifteen minutes.

A Confederate War Song.
The following old war song has been handed us by Mr. Dock Hagin, who has had it written from memory, and is published in the belief that it may be of interest to some as a reminder of the olden time:

Good morning, boys, good morning!
I am just from the front,
And I feel so brave as a Caesar,
And with file and drum a-bawling,
I blow my ears beneath her."

As I was a little "scorcher boy,"
Ploving in the field,
There came along a conscript officer—
He placed a musket in my hand,
And showed me how to fire it.

Bill—How was that?
Bill—He's so absent-minded, you know. He went under the water and forgot to come up.

DR. MARY WALKER, 80, SPENDS TIME ON FARM

Dr. Mary E. Walker, the widely-known advocate of woman's rights and "dress reform," was eighty years old November 25, 1912. Her home is in Oswego, N. Y., and all of her living relatives reside in that vicinity. Much of her life has been spent in traveling about the country with long periods of residence in New York, Washington and other cities. Last March she passed through a dangerous illness and since then she has lived on her farm near Oswego, devoting much of her time to writing. Dr. Walker was born in Oswego, Nov. 26, 1832, her parents being descendants of colonial settlers. They erected on their farm near here the first free school in this section of the state. She attended this school, and later the Syracuse Medical college, where she was graduated M. D. in 1855. She began practice at Rome, N. Y., but later located in Oswego, N. Y.

Among other distinctions Dr. Walker has that of being the first woman physician in the world to hold a complete license as assistant surgeon. Upon the outbreak of the Civil war she entered the Union service in her valuable services in the field she was awarded a medal of honor, which she always wore conspicuously. During her service in the war she had the unique distinction of being exchanged as a prisoner of war for a man of her rank in the service.

In later years Dr. Walker became a leader in the woman's suffrage movement, and she claims to have been the first woman to attempt voting at the polls. She has made extensive speeches before the United States and England.

At the beginning of her professional career Dr. Walker adopted the dress of the American reform costume, but later dressed in full male attire and never discarded it. Attired in a man's frock coat, and carrying in a man's silk hat and wearing a man's cane, Dr. Walker was once a leading topic of discussion when she was touring the country and lecturing upon the proper dress for women.

LAUNCH ORGANIZATION TO IMPROVE RURAL LIFE
A national organization of great importance was launched in New Orleans a few days ago when, at a meeting of the Farmers' National Congress the National Country Life Federation was brought into being. Its purpose is to bring into one body all the organizations throughout the country interested in rural life, and it will have relation to each of them like that which the American Federation of Labor holds toward its affiliated bodies. It is believed that such an organization will have power to better farming conditions and reduce the cost of living. It will endeavor to stop the present drift of young men and women from the rural regions to the city. C. F. S. S. is president of the congress. The meeting was largely attended and the launching of the new organization stirred up a great deal of enthusiasm.

Violon.
I swept the horizon and saw at one glance these glorious elevations that tower the air kindled all the melodies and harmonies of light. I was alone. I disclaimed company. I was a son of God, and I felt utterly, and God and glory. And life—its murmur was like the murmur of the ocean when you hear the beating of the surf against the shore twenty miles away. Life—it was like the faintest, most airy of a fading dream. And the influences that had subdued me in that moment of vision, quiet apart from life and its seductive influences, and there fashion again and readjust all his moral measurements—Henry Ward Beecher.

Emily Bronte.
G. K. Chesterton has added his meed of praise to Emily Bronte, the woman writer, who of all others has perhaps won most unstinted praise from men. A splendid creature, "Wuthering Heights," the author of "Wuthering Heights," and the book itself he finds likewise splendid. "But there is nothing human about it. It might have been written by an angel."

Very Absent-Minded.
Bill—Gill was nearly drowned.
Bill—How was that?
Bill—He's so absent-minded, you know. He went under the water and forgot to come up.

TOADS

This is about toads. Just toads. If you aren't interested about the advertisement or uplift of toads, you really may as well skip the paragraph. Toads have been accused of ability to cause cows to go dry, to carry valuable jewels inside their head, and to cause warts on the hands of naughty little boys. Moreover, no toad can ever hope to take a prize in a beauty show. But scientists of the United States agricultural department have shown that the toad is no gem carrier, doesn't poison infants, cause warts or harm cattle. On the other hand, each toad is worth $19.44 a year as an efficient and paid destroyer of noxious bugs and insects. The toad, in fact, is an epicure in bug eating. As such he should be encouraged in all gardens, farms and woodlands. He is an amiable, but independent, animal, so the use of the term "toadying" is slanderous in respect to him. To life in toads, toads, toads. What is needed is a society for the protection and patronage of toads. Perhaps in time, by scientific method, a handsome race of toads might be evolved.

CLOVES.

Cloves, which are used to good advantage in preserving fruits, are the flower-buds of a tree that usually grows to a height of between 20 and 40 feet, with a beautiful pyramidal head of foliage. The leaves are large, of an oblong shape, and evergreen. The flowers are small, but very abundant. The leaves, flowers and bark of the clove tree possess a strong aromatic perfume. The ripe fruit of this tree is shaped like a small olive. It is sometimes dried and used by the natives, as are also the broken fruit stalks, but the flower-buds are the most valuable part of the tree. They are gathered at the proper season, and dried in the sun. The tree is a native of the Spice Islands, but is also cultivated in Java, West Indies. The oil of cloves is useful in medicine, being often added to tonic mixtures.

POETRY AND THE CHILD.

Read poetry to the child. Read easy, simple, and read nonsense verse, read real poems, read sometimes such poems as "Thanatopsis" and bits of "Paradise Lost." Of course the child will not understand the thought, but he will enjoy the sound, and he will unconsciously learn to read. Poetry was never meant to be read to one's self, but always to be read aloud or recited. It is harder than prose. The order of the words is often unlike our everyday speech, and the words themselves are frequently different. Here especially children need help. If they find it they learn to love poetry, and there are few things that so sweeten life as a genuine love for poetry, for its beauties and for the helpful lines that come to one's mind in hard places—Home Progress Magazine.

ENGLAND'S NATIONAL AIR.

According to Professor Cambourton of Athens the tune of "God Save the King" is one of the oldest we have. Six years ago the professor discovered, among the manuscripts in the Bodleian library of Oxford, a manuscript of 1457 in honor of Emperor Constantine Palaeologus. The anthem opening with the words, "Long may our foreign reign," repeated three times. The musical notation is of an obsolete type and had to be transcribed by the professor. It was then found that the tune of the fifteenth century anthem is almost identical with that of "God Save the King"—London Chronicle.

CONVICTS KEEP THEIR NAMES.

No more ridiculous statement appeared in the press than that a man in prison is known by his number and not by his name. The numbers are serial, explains the Outlook; those at Sing Sing are now over 60,000 and those at Auburn over 21,000 and those at Clinton over 10,000. Imagine how such numbers as names. The guards would be candidates for a madhouse if such a task were theirs. John Jones, a convict, explains how he knows he has a number when he has business with the administration officers: "The number is used in addition to the name, and is a further means of identification."

CARVED WITH POCKETKNIFE.

A clever carved model of the capital at Washington, D. C., has been made by Prof. George P. Stokes of Stokesville, Va. The carving is of wood and was made with no other tool than an ordinary pocketknife, not even a carving knife being used on it. The model consists of more than 200 pieces. The wood used is poplar, and the carving is in white, walnut, red, white pine, and yellow pine. The height of the building is ten inches to the crest of the Liberty statue. The structure is two feet long and about eight inches wide. The ground being used is 141 trees, made of felt of different shades of green, which supply a beautiful and artistic setting for the work.

City and County

Mrs. W. L. Jones and children have returned from a visit of several days with relatives in Cordele.

Mrs. Sidney Smith has returned from a visit of several days with her parents in Savannah, with whom she spent the holidays.

Mrs. R. M. Williams, of Metter, was in the city yesterday, being interested in some valuable real estate in that city belonging to the estate of the late R. M. Williams.

Mr. G. S. Chance, of Statesboro, formerly in the real estate business in Statesboro, was a visitor to the city yesterday. He is engaged in the fruit brokerage business in the capital city.

Mr. J. M. Williams, of Dublin, was a visitor to the city yesterday on business. He was formerly a citizen of Bulloch, and was engaged in the naval stores business about twelve years ago.

An important mercantile change during the week was the purchase of the Porter-Kendrick Co. by Mr. J. G. Blitch, who assumed charge yesterday. His son, J. G. Blitch, jr., is now associated with the management of the business.

Mr. W. E. McDougald, who has been living at Clito for the past two years or more, in charge of the McDougald, Outland & Co. naval stores business, has become a resident of Statesboro, having moved in with his family during the present week.

Elder A. W. Patterson, by invitation, will occupy the pulpit next Sunday at the Baptist church, and will preach both in the morning and at night. The newly called pastor, Rev. J. R. Singleton, of Millerville, will not begin his pastorate until the first Sunday in February.

Elder W. H. Crouse, of Graymont, recently called to the pastorate of the Primitive Baptist church here, will begin his work next Saturday, when he will preach his first sermon to the Statesboro congregation. Services will be held Saturday and Sunday as heretofore.

Dr. Wm. Sadler, author of "The Cause and Cure of Colds," says that common colds should be taken seriously, especially when they "hang on." Foley's Kidney Pills give just the help elderly people need to tone and strengthen their kidneys and bladder, and regulate their action. John McManester, Stretcher, says: "I feel better and stronger than I have for many years, and Foley's Kidney Pills did it." Sold by Franklin Drug Co.

At the home of the bride, in Nashville, Tenn., on Sunday, 5th inst., Miss Bessie Oman and Mr. C. T. McMennore were united in marriage.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple returned to Statesboro, where they arrived Monday afternoon, and are now at home to their friends.

The groom is one of the best known business men of this city, and has made this his home for the past ten years. His former home was in Kentucky, where he met the young lady who has now become his bride.

Big Damage Suit Tried.

A damage suit for $5,500 for slander was tried in the city court Monday, and occupied the time of the court for the entire day.

The case was that of T. J. Malone against Dock Hagin for alleged accusations of a slanderous nature against Malone by Hagin. The particular charge was that Hagin had accused Malone of marking and taking hogs that did not belong to him. Hagin denied making the charge, and declared that he entertained no such suspicion against Malone, whom he regarded as an upright man and his friend.

Another case on the same account is pending against Hagin by Mr. Edensfield, who is Malone's son-in-law. This will not come up for trial until another term of the court.

MESSAGE SENT BY MOUNTAIN

Invaluable Lessons There for Those Who Love Nature and Will Calmly Listen.

It is not your highest mountain, always, that is the fittest palace for a god; or that has most mountain grandeur, or that has most mountain beauty. One could mention some that have but a thousand feet of stature, physically speaking, and yet would be as impressive as the great peaks. There is no savage impatience with them; their breasts are dearer than a mother's. Time was when they towered above the clouds, and were proud Himalayas for immensity, when they were all soaring unapproachable crags, repellent; concerned only with the heavens. But men and mountains drew together, and subtle ties of sympathy were formed. Ages upon ages passed over the peaks, smoothed the brows, filled the chasms, and mantled all with ferns and grasses.

The mighty mother set her face to the world for symbol of the soaring, purple dreams that are within: she strove them with the gold of her peaks, and said to the mountains: "her people, to say that the mountains are the world, though the steam of it be there, and your fingers shall bleed as you pick them, has for a bloom a yellow and most beautiful gleam. But men and mountains drew together, and subtle ties of sympathy were formed. Ages upon ages passed over the peaks, smoothed the brows, filled the chasms, and mantled all with ferns and grasses.
